1. INTRODUCTION

Language has multi functions. It is used to interact with people around. As a tool of communication, language has contributed to make people interact in social community and something that all humans being share. It is also supported by Abuarqoub, (2019). Language is a tool to interact or tool to communicate. People use it as medium to inform something, to express their feelings or to make a request or asking people to do something. Furthermore, Sirbu (2015) language is a crucial part of cultural expression since it is the vehicle through which traditions and values associated with group identification are communicated. People are able to send information or they can communicate each other by using language as media that allows them to produce and understand the message transferred.

The functions of language are more varied. Because people are more attractive and creative in using the language for their activities, for instance in advertising, entertaining or even in daily communication. They rely on language to express themselves, communicate with others, and know the world, Qiu (2014). Beside that, the development of language use becomes wider together along with the function and the growth of technology, not only in direct communication but also in printed media such as; newspapers, magazines, and electronic media. Advertisement is a kind of marketing communication which give message to promote a product, service. It can make decision toward the business with creative idea. It is also important role to raise the purpose of communication and also to get the image of the product itself. According to Solik (2014) advertisement is defined a form of communication, whose author or sponsor sends a message to a recipient (consumer) with the explicit intention to sell a product (or idea) to the customers.

Based on Beattie & Ellis (2014) argue that people have several ways in transferring information and meaning, directly or indirectly. Sometimes it conveys their feelings or their evaluation toward something. It is important to determine how they use words in certain situation, especially in advertising. In advertising, the advertisers are relied almost totally on the use of language in order to make the language of advertisement more interesting to the readers. They can use various methods to create their advertisement. Using meaningful language is one of the efforts to gain reader's attention. It concerns on the words used and the expression they made. It also needs creativity to combine the words into a good sentence. It is common to use language emotionally in normal communication. The same cases are also found in advertisements. When it refers to the use of language in advertisements, it mostly concerns on how the sentences influence people emotionally. It is important because it helps the advertiser in sending the message by communicating their feelings and their attitudes, and helps them to appeal to people's emotion. Together along with his writing about what he is describing, the advertiser fills the sentences with the best-selected words or clause to reflect his evaluation about things. This evaluation conveys his feelings and attitude. Sometimes it shows as emotional sequences rather than description.

Jakobson in Holmes (2001), classifies language functions into six types. They are expressive, directive, poetic, phatic, referential, and metalinguistic function. Those six types of language will be explained as follows:

a. Expressive Function

Expressive function means express the speaker’s feelings. This focuses on addresser; it means that a speaker addresses a message. The aim of expressive function is to convey the speaker’s emotion or expression. The aim of a direct expression of the speaker’s attitude toward what he is speaking about. It tends to produce an impression of a certain emotion whether true of feigned. It means that the addressee’s own towards the content of the message is emphasized.

b. Directive Function
Direct function means attempt to get someone to do something. It means that language used for the purpose of causing (or preventing) overt action. This function is most commonly found in commands and requests. Directive function focuses on the addressee; it means that the speaker needs the reaction from the hearer or to make someone perform a particular action. The aim of directive function is to convey the speaker’s commands.

c. Referential Function
Referential function means provide information. Essentially, referential function is the communication of information. This function affirms or denies propositions, as in science or the statement of fact. These sentences have a truth value; that is, the sentences are either true or false (recognizing, of course, that we might not know what 86 that truth value is). Hence, they are important for logic. Referential function focuses on the context; it means that referent or subject matter of discourse, and what it refers to. The aim referential function is to convey the information.

d. Metalinguistic Function
Metalinguistic function means comment on the language itself. This function is the use of language to discuss or describe itself. It focuses attention upon the code itself, to clarify it or negotiate it. This is the function of language about language. Metalinguistic function is also predominant in question like “Sorry, what did you say?”, where the code is misunderstood and needs correction or clarification. The aim of metalinguistic function is to convey the code analysis.

e. Poetic Function
Poetic function means focus on aesthetic feature of language. It is in which the particular form chosen is the essence of the message. Messages convey more than just the content. They always contain a creative ‘touch’ of our own. These additions have no purpose other than to make the messages ‘nicer’. The word poetic does not refer to the ability to write poetry, but the ability to manipulate language in a creative way. The aim of poetic function is to convey the pleasure.

f. Phatic Function
Phatic function means express solidarity and empathy with others. The phatic function helps to establish contact and refers to the channel of communication. It opens the channel or checking that it is working, either for social reason. This function is used for sociability. Therefore, sometimes vernacular words used in this function. The phatic use of language is characteristic mainly of speech, however, in a certain type of writing it can be also noticing as in letters for example, where the beginning Dear Sir/Madam and ending Yours Faithfully also serve that purpose.

In discussing affective meaning, it also concerns on communicative function of the language. Leech (1981), Yaguello (1998), Leech (1981), divides the function into five, there are; expressive, directive, esthetic, phatic, and informational function. Expressive function is a function, which is used to express the feeling and the attitude of the speaker. Furthermore, in analyzing the affective meaning, not all the language functions above are used. Those language functions are limited into:

a. Expressive, denoting or showing emotion and expressing the speaker’s or writer’s feeling or thought. Languages as instrument of inner mental states, for instance; swear words and exclamations (Leech, 1981: 40).
b. Directive, directly, influencing and controlling the behavior or attitudes of others. Pointing the objects instead of describing them in language (Leech, 1981:41). For instance; command, request and inviting. For example: Don’t miss this opportunity to save.

c. Esthetic, defined as the use of language. Creating an artistic effect and pleased the sense of imagination (Leech, 1981: 41).

d. Those functions are related to the effective meaning in arousing emotion of the reader or audience. In other words, these three functions from is the ideal classification to analyse effective meaning, because the effective meaning explicitly expressed with emotional words.

i. Function: oriented to:

f. Directive listener/ reader

g. Esthetic message (Leech, 1981)

Briefly, in interpreting the language, it is important to look on how the language reflects the situation, mood, feeling, or the atmosphere of the speaker. We recognized some words from different dimensions, conceptual or connotative of the word use, in which the utterance takes place. Thus, dimensions reflect the personal feeling of the speaker, including his attitude to something he is talking about. But, still, if there is a question about meaning, it might point to something in the world.

Last, affective Meaning is grounded in behavior (perception and action) and neural circuitry of the producer or the interpreter of linguistic signs Aryani et al., (2018). It effects on the (physical and emotional) well-being of the person saying or hearing it, and everything that matters is represented in each individual person's brain and its neurophysiological systems. Affective meaning, which is related to the feeling of the speaker in using the language personally, toward the listener or toward the object of speaking. Affective meaning as the language that reflects the personal feeling of the speaker, including the attitude of the speaker toward the listener, or the speaker’s attitude about what being said.
